It is reported that a hash foundry company has been organized not a thousand miles from this city, on a matrimonial basis. The firm, it is said, consists of five blushing maidens, each of whom is of a decidedly matrimonial turn of mind, and have invested what spare capital they could acrape up with a view to bringing themselves into an early market. The plan of operation is well laid, and the unsuspecting individuals who are to be captured and made happy are the various gentlemen boarders, who, by the way, are to be spied out with a special view to their pecuniary standing. The conditions of the compact, it is said, are such that the first member of the firm who is so lucky as to strike a matrimonial bonanza, shall have the privilege of gobbling the assets of the aforsaid firm, and the remaining fragments of the company are then to reorganize and continue business in the same manner until all are happily disposed.
